Committee Ready For Swim Season

WEDDING OF THE YEAR

CLIMAX TO THE YEAR'S most romantic love story was the lavish wedding ceremony which united Princess Margaret, the Queen's sister, and Antony Armstrong-Jones. The happy couple, shown in a formal study at top and a carefree jocular moment at the races below, are now heading for the Caribbean in the Royal Yacht Brittania for their honeymoon. Labor members of parliament complained that they felt the government is "overdoing things a bit" by spending more than $182,000 for the wedding and honeymoon of Princess Margaret. This is 11 times as much as was spent in 1947 when Princess Elizabeth was married to the Duke of Edinburgh, although she was at the time heiress presumptive. Decorations this time were about $70,000 while in 1947 they totalled $16,800. Thousands of northern Albertans saw video films of the wedding on CFRN-TV at 10 a.m. Friday and later at 7 p.m.

Mrs. A. Benoit of Edmonton is a guest at the home of her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. Breau.

Mr. and Mrs. Hector Linnell and Maurice spent the Easter weekend in Edmonton.

Returns To Norway After Thirty Years

LAC LA BICHE — Mr. and Mrs. Jus Byrkelo left May 3 by air for Norway to visit Mr. Byrkelo's 88-year-old mother, three sisters and three brothers.

Mr. Byrkelo left Norway 30 years ago and has never been back. He has been a prominent mink farmer for the past 15 years and is president of the Fur Farmers' Association.

Mrs. Byrkelo has worked in the post office for more than 20 years and this is the first real holiday from the post office for her.

They expect to be away about two months.

Fire Destroys Pens, Poultry And Chicks

EGG LAKE — On April 21 Bernard Amiot had the misfortune of having his chicken coop burned to the ground, with 100 laying hens and 100 five-week old chickens.

Fortunately, they could save the other buildings. A granary full of cleaned grain for seed, only a few feet from the burning building, was saved by throwing pails of water on the roof.

Luckily the wind was blowing south-east and away from the other buildings. It was lucky also that the fire started only towards morning and they could see it before it had spread to other buildings.

There was no insurance.

Ukrainian Foods Served At Dinner

OWL RIVER — Mr. and Mrs. Dmetro Skyrpan entertained a large number of friends at a dinner party on Easter Sunday. Many hard to prepare Ukrainian foods were served to the appreciative guests.

Wandering River

Mrs. Annie Haley and children of Edmonton were Easter weekend visitors at the home of the former's parents.

Frank Roskewich and family spent Easter in Berryville visiting relatives.

Students Describe Varsity Courses, Emphasize Requirements, Standards

The regular meeting of the Lac la Biche Home and School was held April 29 in the Dr. Swift School. President L. J. Bartman was in the chair and Mrs. F. W. McMillan was secretary.

Reports were given by the treasurer and by Mr. Lobay, chairman of the recreation committee. Mr. Lobay announced that a swimming instructor has been engaged for six weeks during the summer months. Arrangements are going ahead for improved facilities at the dock for swimming. Applications will soon be sent out to some 200 persons who signified their desire to receive instruction in swimming classes. It is expected a fee of $1.50 a month will be charged for lessons. Adults as well as children may take advantage of these classes when the necessary requirements, i.e. medical examination, etc, have been met. It is planned to enlist the aid of some of the older boys as assistants during this course.

A letter was read from Mrs. H. Joncas expressing her regret that she finds it necessary to terminate her duties as piano teacher. A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Joncas for her excellent work in teaching piano to some 65 students. Before the meeting closed, a committee comprising Mrs. J. Booker, Mrs. J. Breau, Mrs. J. Stewart, M. Maccagno and F. Creighton were chosen to work toward securing a full time music teacher for piano, band, and other instruments. It was the opinion of

HOT OFF THE PRESS:

Booklet Describes Overseas Trip Of Former Lac La Biche Priest

"Across The Pond" is the latest literary effort of the Very Rev. J. E. McGrane, RCN (R), former parish priest for Lac la Biche, now of Calmar.

Rev. McGrane has taken articles that were published in the Lac la Biche Herald describing the trip he made to the British Isles and Europe between 1958 and May, 1959, and has had them printed in booklet form.

Founder of the Exeter Sea Cadet corps of Lac la Biche which has won international renown, he is also a qualified projectionist, printer, magician and, of course, writer. His prior publications include a history of the Exeter corps and a small book on magic.

In a breezy style, Rev. McGrane shares with readers time spent in England visiting the home of his youth, a private and public audience with Pope Jonh XXIII, a trip to the Grotto and Basilica of Lourdes, then Belgium and London and so on.

In this issue of the Lac la Biche Herald, Rev. McGrane is advertising the fact that the booklet "Across the Pond" can be obtained postpaid for 60 cents. The earlier publication "The Exeter and the North Saskatchewan" can be had for $1.75, or as a combination offer with "Across the Pond" for only $2.00. Readers may order direct from Post Office Box 218, Calmar.

M. Hamar Elected President By Retail Merchants' Association

At a meeting of the retailers of Lac la Biche which was conducted by the representative of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada (Alta.) Inc., April 28, and attended by 12 retailers it was unanimously voted that a Lac la Biche division of the Retail Merchants' Association be established to promote the interests of both the retailers and consumers of the entire community, having foremost in mind to maintain complete co-operative support with the Lac la Biche Chamber of Commerce, but at the same time to provide a closer bond of relationship with each retailer in matters pertaining to retailers only, and within which these matters may be discussed among retailers themselves.

Those in attendance were Dave Skakun, Richard Dancit, Robert Joncas, James Stewart, Louis Rudiger, Jerry Karasinski, Mike Fedorow, E. Tkachuk, Joe Lieble, B. Terrabain, Hec. McCormick, and Michael Hamar.

The committee elected is composed of: president, M. Hamar; 1st vice-president, W. Terrabain; 2nd vice-president, J. Stewart; 3rd vice-president, Robert Joncas; secretary, Joe Lieble.

It was then decided that a meeting be called in the near future to discuss the forming of the constitutions and bylaws for the organization.

Anna L'Heureux, Raymond Kohnen Exchange Wedding Vows And Rings

LAC LA BICHE—St. Catherine's Roman Catholic church was the scene of a pretty spring wedding April 28, when Miss Anna Marie L'Heureux became the bride of Mr. Raymond John Kohnen.

Father Viel officiated at the double-ring service which united in marriage the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. L'Heureux of Lac la Biche and the only son of Mr. and Mrs. John Kohnen of Langenburg, Sask.

The bride was charming in a floor-length gown of silk organza, styled with a full skirt, featuring a pleated cumberbund with large self bows in the back. The bodice and lily-point sleeves were of lace. The scalloped neckline was trimmed with sequins and seed pearls. Her chapel veil was held in place by a dainty crown of seed pearls and brilliants. The bride's jewelry consisted of a strand of cultured pearls with matching earrings, a gift of the groom. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses.

Miss Lucille L'Heureux was her sister's attendant. She chose a ballerina length gown of powder blue net over taffeta with white picture hat and white accesssories. Her colonial bouquet was of white and blue flowers.

Best man for the occasion was Mr. Lorne Buckberger of Drayton Valley.

Mrs. Lucille Joncas was organist and during the service Mrs. Joncas and Mrs. J. Breau sang a duet.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents for some 40 relatives and friends.

To receive her guests, the bride's mother wore a mauve figured silk gown with blue accessories.

The bride's table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake and spring flowers.

Dr. D. D. Bouvier proposed a toast to the bride.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. J. Rudiger and children of Barrhead.

The young couple will reside in Drayton Valley.

ASK YOUR DEALER ABOUT THE CERTIFIED CAR CARE PLAN

THE Homemaker

By BERTHA M. McCUTCHEON

Mrs. C. F. Bentley, Textiles Chairman of the Alberta section of the Canadian Association of Consumers has some good information for all of us.

B. McCutcheon

At this season many women are taking inventory of clothing needs of the various members of the family. For the woman who sews, some new fabrics will be purchased in the next several weeks. For the homemaker who is planning a shopping tour, ready-made garments and yard goods are sure to be on her list.

Now is the time before one buys, to firmly resolve to get the best of one's fabric dollar ! Appearance, performance and easy-care are three very important considerations before purchasing material or ready-to-wear items. Do not be in the position of having made a purchase only to find out that the garment will require more time in upkeep than you can or wish to give.

There are several easy-care fabrics available today. As time goes on, there will be more of them.

Knitwear for many years has been "easy-care" or "wash-and-wear;" useful and practical for small children; for growing children's clothing; for growing children's play clothes, underwear and nightwear; for adult clothing of several types. Jersey and Tricot both give satisfactory performance

Terry Cloth is an excellent no-iron fabric for bath robes, some housecoats, and beachwear accessories.

Cotton Plisses and Nylon Plisses are easy-care as are the seersucker weave fabrics. These materials have been available for a number of years and have proven that minimum care is sufficient to give the garment a presentable appearance. Quality in any of these fabrics, along with good construction processes, will assure satisfactory performance of the garment.

Now, in addition to these "old timers" there are cottons with special finishes and cottons blended with synthetic fibres, and synthetic fibres alone or in mixtures These "new timers" can also give easy-care performance.

If one is not familiar with a certain fabric, ask the clerk or the manager for information. Frequently, these people have more knowledge of the material than that advertised. If the information available is not adequate, one shouldn't buy a cat in a bag, but instead purchase fabric of which one does have reliable information

Some fabrics do not have long-lasting finishes — some do. Some fabric blends do not insure easy-care — some do. A high percentage of synthetic blended with cotton is desirable for resistance to wrinkling and mussing in wear, for quick drying in the laundering process and for resistance to wear at elbows, cuffs, collars and pockets. Sixty-five percent of dacron blended with cotton is very satisfactory for many garments. This percentage of dacron blended with linen also gives satisfactory performance. A high percentage of Orlon blended with a small percentage of cotton, or rayon or wool will give easy-care performance. Dacron, orlon and nylon each used alone give good easy-care performance.

One must keep in mind that the fiber, its finish or blend, are important to maintaining the appearance and performance; but so is construction. Many garments today are discarded because of inferior sewing techniques. So, look at the fabric — but also look at the construction before you buy — or when you sew. When the garment has been washed five times will it still be in good condition, or will you need to spend some more time in re-construction?

The Spine Is The Key To Health

By Dr. K. W. Tenove, Chiropractor

Why do people get sick? You consult the doctor of your choice with a disorder. It may be your stomach bothering you or a headache. Why did the symptom develop?

God breathed into man the breath of life and left within a "body manager". If this were not true, how then could the stomach get just the right amount of digestive juices to perform digestion of food that in its original state is useless to the human body? If this were not true, how could the lungs take from the air you breathe just the right amount of oxygen to supply the body needs?

When electricity is properly conducted over wire through a circuit it will perform a duty: light a lamp, run a motor, make your TV or radio work. When interference in the circuit exists, you know the results. No light, motor stops, TV goes out, etc. Cross two wires in a circuit and you blow a fuse or kick the circuit breaker out.

The spinal cord could be compared to a large cable with multiple circuits conducting impulses from brain to body and back to brain. This is "body manager" at work. Should a jar resulting from a fall, accident, strain or jolt from slipping, or mental shock be encountered, the result in the body would be similar to creating a short circuit in your home wiring system.

Interference is created to the normal transmission of life giving nerve energy from brain to body, or the circuit may be blocked from body to brain. An incoordination is the result with abnormal body function manifested by disease, illness, pain or what have you.

The name applied is quite immaterial when one understands that it is simply an interference to normal "body manager" control. 100% normal brain supply to body results in 100% normal health for that body. Less than 100% brain supply results in less than normal health or disease.

Chiropractors are especially trained to "trouble shoot" the spine. Did you ever see a contractor read blue prints? From the blue print, he determines what material is necessary for construction of the desired building. Also in the blue print, the electrician is able to see what wiring is essential for the various circuits.

Chiropractors are well versed in the construction of the spine in order that the abnormal might be readily detected and repaired. For years, the chiropractor has depended upon his sense of touch. The chiropracter is able to determine the exact spot where nerve pressure exists. He is able, after reducing the pressure to prove his work. Health restoration under chiropractic health service has improved with time.

I have longed to put words together to illustrate how additional irration might impair body function even after nerve interference has been corrected. Few chiropractors have time to stop and explain to each patient what the effect of 'spinal curvatures' might be in the body.

In order that we might understand the curvature (abnormal bending of the spine), let us picture a rather strong spring about two feet long. Holding the spring vertically, if we were to hold one end in either hand, bending the top slightly to left or right, what would happen to the remainder of the spring? It would 'adapt' itself to the bend at the top and a 'curve' would be the result.

Should we fasten a cross beam slightly toward the centre from each and then apply the bend to the spring we would note that the cross beams go down on one side and up on the other.

Now, look at your neighbor standing. Does he have one shoulder just slightly higher than the other? Notice lower tips of his ears, isn't one just a little lower than the other? Something bent his spring (spine) and the result is spinal curvature.

It is unfortunate that your spine will not straighten as rapidly as the spring when the bend is taken out of your neck by settlement of the misplaced or subluxated vertebrae. This "body manager" however, will, with the aid of its helpers in the body, bring about correction of spinal curvature in time when subluxated vertebrae are adjusted & readjusted when they slip again.

How will a spinal curvature affect your health, even when you do not have subluxated vertebrae? Remember that with very little exception that the subluxation precedes the spinal curvature. During the years of "adaptation" when your spine is going from its normal curves to abnormal as a result of subluxation in the back, what is happening to the other bones of the body? What is happening to placement of body tissues and organs?

They must also adapt from normal to abnormal simply because every tissue and bone of the body is fastened either directly or indirectly to the back bone. Curvature of the spine then would distort the entire body. As a result, it would be possible to have irritation in various tissues or organs which might be felt in the form of a symptom. One might feel soreness in a foot, for example, due to abnormal balance of body weight and over-taxation of muscles or bone structure. Abdominal symptoms might occur from time to time during adaptation of curvature back to normal.

Should one encounter such symptoms when your chiropractor advises that nerve pressure is clearing we must remember that the "body manager" or innate is at work rebuilding and repairing our body to its fullest extent and that adaptations are toward normal from abnormal.

Is it any wonder that chiropractors maintain that the spine is the key to health? A properly adjusted spine is your best assurance of as near normal health as possible. Regardless of symptoms, have the cause removed and live more abundantly. Subluxations are the cause of disease.

Work To Begin By September, States Gordon Taylor, Minister Of Highways

SMOKY LAKE — Of interest to residents of this area was the statement by Highways Minister Gordon Taylor, at a meeting in Andrew, that a $900,000 bridge is to be built across the North Saskatchewan River, replacing the Shandro ferry.

Construction of the bridge which will be 28 feet wide and 1250 feet long, should commence not later than September, 1960, and should be in service in 1961.

Mr. Taylor showed a plan of the river from Fort Saskatchewan to Duvernay and stated that in due time a total of three bridges will be built, but as the Shandro ferry crossing is used more, it would be given preference.

A large crowd attended the meeting, including representatives from Andrew, Redwater, Smoky Lake, Vilna, Vegreville, Waskatenau, Willingdon and Warspite.

Other government officials included Alex W. Gordey, MLA and Nick Melnyk, MLA.

ABUNDANT LIFE

by ORAL ROBERTS

CHRIST IS A PERSON

There is a great influence from Christ in the world today. His Spirit is present in varied forms all over the universe. Christ is also an idea in the minds of millions of people, but above and beyond all of these is the outstanding fact—Christ is a person.

Christ is the Son of man and the Son of God. He is a person who can be in your heart, who can walk by your side, who can talk with you day by day throughout your human existence. Christ is a person.

He was born a person. God was His father, the Virgin Mary was His mother. He was known as a person to these parents. He was known as a person to the lowly, humble shepherds who came to worship Him. Several days later the wise men came from various parts of the world to worship Him.

They looked upon Him as a person. Later in the temple of God He was known as a person to Simeon, the prophet, and Anna, the prophetess.

King Herod knew Christ as a person and was afraid of Him. The angels knew Him as a person and worshiped Him. The people of Nazareth knew Christ as a person—and rejected Him. As a twelve-year-old boy He was known as a person by the priests and lawyers in the temple of Jerusalem.

Christ preached and healed as a person. Satan challenged Him as a person, coming to Him in the wilderness and tempting Him face to face as a person. Satan knew Christ was a person.

The disciples knew Him as a person. Christ died as a person, as a man on a cross, hanging suspended between heaven and earth. He died as a person in our place and He rose as the Son of God.

And He is a person near and dear to me, Oral Roberts. I first knew Christ as a person when I was a child. Growing up in my father and mother's home, I found that they were so close to Christ that they talked with Him, they walked with Him.

And when I gave my life to God, Christ became nearer and dearer to me as a person, not only in my heart but also by my side and in my hands.

I believe not only that Christ is a Spirit, an idea, a symbol filling the world, but that He is also a person, a living man and He, Jesus, is in my heart. He as a person walks by my side and speaks in my ear.

Jesus Christ is a person. He wants to be in you. He wants to be with you. He wants to walk beside you—and that makes all the difference in the world. He invites you now to accept Him as your personal Saviour, a Saviour who is a person.

By-Law Passed For The Control Of Poultry And Domestic Animals

TWO HILLS — A by-law was passed at the council meeting held on March 28 to prohibit the keeping of poultry and domestic animals within the limits of the town, except in two specified areas in the southern portion of town. In these areas permission must be obtained from the town after an inspection from the health unit has determined that the premises upon which said poultry or animals would be kept is suitable for the numbers that the owner wishes to keep. Also periodic inspections may be made by the inspector to see that all regulations with respect to santitation and health are being kept. Under the by-laws domestic animals include horses, cattle, goats, pigs, donkies etc.

The matter of the installation of a large fire siren was discussed and more information is being sought before final decision would be made by council.

The Two Hills School Division presented the 1960 requisition of 28 mills, an increase of two mills over the 1959 requisition, on the rateable assessment.

Students Describe Varsity Courses

many that a full time music teacher would have no difficulty in securing enough pupils in the town and surrounding areas to make a comfortable living.

Mrs. E. Cunningham, Grade 11 teacher, won the attendance record with 16 points.

The highlight of the evening was talks given by university students from this district on the different courses offered at university.

Introduced by F. W. McMillan, principal of Dr. Swift School, students who spoke included: Johnny Maccagno, 2nd year student in the faculty of medicine; Roger Langevin, 3rd year student in education; Iris Duban, 2nd year education; Carol Stewart and Marilyn McMillan, 1st year students in pharmacy and Carol Keehn, 1st year student in home economics.

The young people all gave interesting information on requirements of Varsity life. Johnny Maccagno stressed the need of preparing in High school for the increased requirements of good study habits in university. He stated it was necessary to have some definite career in mind and a goal to aim for when entering university, and the ambition and will to work hard to reach one's goal.

Roger Langevin, who has now obtained his BA in History and expects to have his BA in Education in one more year said, few students appreciate their High School teachers till they are through school. But, he said, teacher are the necessary instruments to train students for higher education. He also said that some students are not cut out for university careers; they should be encouraged to acquire specific training in other trades as: mechanics, welders, carpenters, etc. He also stated that education for a girl was like an insurance policy and parents and teachers should encourage the girls to obtain some kind of special training in case they were required in later years to be the bread-winner.

Iris Duban explained the different standards offered in the faculty of education.

Carol Stewart told of her enthusiasm for the pharmacy course, due to her love of science. She stated that there is much lab work involved but that it was all interesting.

Marilyn McMillan described life in Pembina residence where some 150 girls from all points of Canada as well as Britain, Europe and Hong Kong, reside the first year they are in Varsity. She stated, "it can truly be said that university is a community of people in pursuit of knowledge". She said the regular hours of study required for the first year students in residence are a great help scholastically. The socal life is well taken care of as well in residence. She advised any young girl about to enter university to apply for residence at Pembina Hall.

Carol Keehn, in first year home economics, says they are dubbed the "most unknown faculty on campus", and are accused of having ulterior motives in studying cooking and home management but she declared it was all worthwhile and graduates are able to obtain well paid positions upon graduation. Subjects to concentrate on during High School in preparation for this course are chemistry, mathmatics and English, Miss Keehn advised.

Lieut. Bridgeman of the "Queen's Own Rifles" spoke on "How University Training and the Armed Services go Together". He told of the officers training plan and how eventually the Armed Services hope to have all officers, university trained.

He explained the courses and qualifications necessary and said that after completing the course and fulfilling the three years of compulsary military service, young men could then go out into civilian life, well trained and with practical experience.

J. Williams, chairman of the Lac la Biche School Division, presented the top students in last year's Grade 12 and Grade 9 classes, Marilyn McMillan and Olga Mischuk, with gold pins from the school division.

The meeting closed with God Save the Queen. Lunch was served by Mrs. B. Romanuik and her able assistants.

Most smokers quit several times a day.

Fear Heavy Infestation Redback Cutworms In Alberta This Year

Government sources say that Alberta will experience a heavy infestation of red-backed cutworms this year. Farmers will rest better knowing that prairie crops of cereals, rape, and flax can be treated with poison sprays to kill the cutworms.

Tests at the Saskatoon research station, Canada Dept. of Agriculture, have shown that emulsion sprays of aldrin, chlordane, dieldrin, endrin, and heptachlor are just as effective as the poisoned bran baits used a few years ago.

During the past few years, each insecticide was tested at several rates, in plots infested with red-backed cutworms.

Good results were obtained from the following rates of active insecticide per acre: aldrin 8 ounces; chlordane 24 ounces; dieldrin 4 ounces; endrin 4 ounces, heptachlor 8 ounces.

Each treatment killed ninety per cent or more of the worms within four days after the plots were sprayed.

The insecticides can easily be applied to large fields with the common boom-type sprayer. The spray cover the surface of the soil and the crop and acts as a stomach and contact poison. Cutworms are poisoned when they eat sprayed plants, and also when they crawl over the sprayed soil. The contact effect makes it possible to kill cutworms in fields where there is little or no plant growth.

Poison sprays leave a residue on plants, so should not be used on crops that will be fed to livestock, such as clovers, alfalfa, and sugar beets. Poisoned bran baits are still useful in controlling red-backed cutworms in field crops and gardens.

Endrin must not be used on gardens.

The publication "Chemical Control of Insect Pests, 1960" is available at the offices of G. Godel, district agriculturist and H. Armfelt, field supervisor.

The Three Faces Of Eve

Chapter 11

By Corbett H. Thigpen, M.D., and Hervey M. Cleckley, M.D.

Many months followed during which there were three patients to interview and work with.

Jane showed awareness of what both Eves did and thought, but had little or no direct access to their stores of knowledge and their memories prior to her emergence upon the scene. If either recalled an event from the past she gained some knowledge of it, but had no recognition of its being her own experience.

Through her reports the therapist could often determine when Eve Black was lying.

Jane at first felt herself personally free from Eve White's responsibilities and attachments, and in no way identified with her in the role of wife and mother. From the beginning she seemed capable of warmth, and probably of devotion and valid love. She cooperated with sincerity and with judgment and originality beyond most of the others.

Though it took her a while to learn what was quite new to her, she soon took over many of Eve White's tasks at work and at home in efforts to relieve and assist her. Her feelings toward Eve's little girl appeared to be those of a wise and really compassionate woman toward the child of a family not her own, but still a child in emotional privation.

BECAME MORE ACTIVE

Her warm impulses to take a more active role with this little girl were complicated by the deep conviction that she must not in any way act so as to come between the distressed mother and her only child.

During the first few months of her separate existence Jane became stronger and more active. As time passed she stayed "out" more and more. She could emerge only through Eve White, not finding it possible to displace Eve Black or to communicate through her.

Almost any observer would, we thought after several months of study, find it obvious that Jane, and she only of the three, might solve the deepest problems that had brought the patient we call Eve White to us for treatment.

If Jane could remain in full possession of that integrated human functioning we call personality, our patient would probably, it appeared, regain full health, eventually adjust satisfactorily, perhaps at a distinctly superior level, and find her way to a happy life.

LITTLE HAPPINESS AHEAD

Should this occur, it seemed then very unlikely that Ralph White's wife would ever return to him. On the other hand it was little more likely that Eve White, even if she became free of all that she had known as symptoms, could or would ever take up her role again as wife in that marriage. Should she try to do so, it was difficult to foresee much happiness for her or the husband. The probability of deep and painful conflict was apparent, also the real danger of psychosis.

Were we impersonal arbiters in such a matter, it would have been easy to see, and to say, that the only practical or rational solution to this astonishing problem was for Jane to survive, and Jane only.

A steadily prevailing Eve Black would indeed be a travesty of woman. The surface was indeed appealing, but this likable hoyden, though apparently too shallow, too incomplete, and too good-natured to plan or do deeds of willful malice, would, if unrestrained, forever carry disaster lightly in each hand.

The sense of duty, the willingness for self-sacrifice, so strong and so beautiful in Eve White, might bring her back repeatedly into this marital situation which she lacked the emotional vigor to deal with, and in which it was not likely she could survive. Jane, whose integrity and potential goodness seemed not less than that of Eve White, held rich promise of the power to survive, even to triumph against odds.

DEATH FOR EVE BLACK?

We did not judge ourselves wise enough to make active decisions or exert personal influence in shaping what seemed to impend.

It is plain that, even if we had this wisdom, the responsibility was not ours. Would any physician order euthanasia for the heedlessly merry and amoral but nevertheless unique Eve Black? If so, it is our belief it could not be a physician who had directly known and talked for hours with her, not one who had felt the inimitable identity of her capricious being.

A surviving Jane would provide for Eve White's half-lost little girl a maternal figure of superb resources. Perhaps in time she could give the child a love as real and deep as that of the mother herself. But would those feelings be the actual and unique feelings that sustained the frail and tormented Eve White in her long, pathetic, and steadfast struggle to give the child a chance for happiness?

It may be said that this is foolish and tedious quibbling, that Jane after all, was the little girl's real mother. Was not the child born of her body?

WAS JANE HER MOTHER?

All awareness of her as a daughter ever experienced by Eve White was, to be sure, recorded in the electrochemical patterns of Jane's brain. True indeed. But was she her mother?

Those who had known Eve White personally would find it hard to accept simple affirmation as the whole truth. What this whole truth is can be better sensed in direct feeling than conveyed by explanation.

The psychotherapist's responsibility in such a complex matter is not always easy to determine. Our experience made us feel very keenly the wish not to exert pressures arbitrarily and perhaps play a part in the extinction of qualities possibly of real value if they could be integrated into more responsible patterns of behavior.

We believed there was some choice open to the psychiatrist as to which personality he should try to reinforce, but that he must be tentative and work along with developments within the patient (or patients?) rather than make full and final judgments.

JANE GROWS IN INFLUENCE

We felt that therapy had played a part in the emergence of Jane, but we did not consider her merely our creation. Our influence seemed to have been more catalytic than causal. Psychotherapy had not been directed according to an arbitrary plan.

Jane continued to grow in influence to be out more and more. Through Eve White's exercise of memory she (Jane) established contact with some events in the early life of the other, and seemed to become more rooted in a past. We could not predict with any great confidence the outcome, but we became hopeful that some reasonably good adjustment might work out through the capacities contributed by Jane.

Jane, who appeared to have some not quite articulate understanding or grasp of this whole matter, not available to either of the Eves, shared our sharp reluctance about participating in any act that might contribute to Eve White's extinction.

Unlike Eve Black, Jane soon gained profound and compassionate realization of Eve White's relation to her child. The possibility, the danger of a permanent loss of all touch with reality had occurred to Eve White. Through this we found a better appreciation of her feelings as a mother. Too restrained ordinarily by modesty to speak freely about such a matter, after hypnosis she offered, in quiet tones of unmeasurable conviction, to accept this extinction if it might win for Bonnie Jane's presence in the role she felt that she herself had not succeeded in filling adequately for her child.

INVISIBLE FORCES

It has been said that a man must first lay down his life if he is to find it. Was it possible, we wondered, that this mother might, through her very renunciation somehow survive and find a way back to the one and dearest thing she was ready to leave forever?

That we did not know. Long and intimate personal relations with this patient had brought us to tion to prevent her possible arrest biologic forces and processes still invisible to us, still uncomprehended and not quite imaginable.

Several months after the appearance of Jane, Eve White, anything but a physically bold or instinctively active person, was challenged suddenly by an event which for her was momentous. (The reader should remember that Eve White's child, Bonnie, was still living with her grandparents at this time.) Of this Jane, deeply moved, wrote to the therapist:

"Today she did something that made me know and appreciate her as I had not been able to do before. I wish I could tell her what I feel but I can't reach her.

"She must not die yet. There's so much I must know, and so very much I must learn from her. She is the substance of, 'This above all, to thine own self be true.' In her, too, 'the quality of mercy is not strained.' I want her to live—not me!

SAVED A LITTLE BOY

"She saved the life of a little boy today. Everybody thought him to be her child, because she darted out in front of a car to pick him up and take him to safety. But instead of putting him down again, the moment his baby arms went around her neck, he became her baby — and she continued to walk down the street carrying him in her arms.

"I have never been thus affected by anything in my four months of life. There seemed only one solution to prevent her possible arrest for kidnapping. That was for me to come out and find the child's mother. In the end I had to give him to a policeman.

"Later tonight when she had come back out, she was searching for her own baby. She had her baby again for a short while this afternoon; and I'm so happy for that. I still can't feel Eve Black. I can't believe she's just given up. I feel inexpressibly humble."

Next Week—Jane and the two Eves appear before the American Psychiatric Association. (From the book "The Three Faces of Eve" copyright 1957 by Corbett H. Thigpen and Hervey M. Cleckley, and published by cGraw-Hill Book Co., Inc.) Distributed by The Register and Tribune Syndicate.

Says Girl's Sex Life In London Starts At 13, Sometimes At 12

LONDON — Sex life begins at 13 for an increasing number of British girls, and for a few the age is 12, a health congress of social workers heard.

Teen-age promiscuity among girls grows steadily, and the typical offender today is the office girl, it was indicated.

The statistics on illicit sex were presented to the Congress of the Royal Society of Health at Torquay, attended by 3,300 persons from 42 countries.

The surveys were presented by Miss Joan O'Hare, child care officer of the Cornwall County Council. Most of her studies were made in London.

In 1936, Miss O'Hare reported, 16 per cent of the women who sought aid at a large London clinic for venereal disease were under 21. The figure last year was 21 per cent.

REMAIN SUBMERGED

"Yet these figures can do no more than hint at the size of the problem which, like the proverbial iceberg, must remain nine-tenths submerged," Miss O'Hare said.

"It is less rare than people think for school children to have sex adventures with several partners. Most promiscuous girls admit to initial sexual acts between the ages of 13 and 16. Many admit that they had their first boy friend whom they viewed sexually at the age of 12 or 13."

Teen-age girls do not get enough help in their struggles with new and difficult emotions, and there are many influences to throw them off balance, Miss O'Hare continued.

"A flood of cheap literature, comics, popular music and films is aimed at youths with high spending power," she said. "The cinema is now in the main frequented by teen-agers who are bored with television.

MORE EXCITEMENT

"Highly promiscuous girls are particularly attracted by certain types of popular music, and especially by horror films, which they visit accompanied by males and which provide them with great sexual excitement."

Miss O'Hare was supported, in the main by Dr. Doris M. Odlum, honorary consulting physician for psychological medicine of the Elizabeth Garrett Anderson Hospital for London.

Dr. Odlum said: "There is still an incredible amount of prudery and ignorance still prevalent on the part of parents. It is almost unbelievable that even today there are girls who think that by kissing a man in the dark they can become pregnant."

Ann Hula Crowned Queen At Bazaar

The University of Alberta Mixed Chorus will sing at Lac la Biche Memorial Hall, Friday, May 13.

U of A Chorus To Sing At Lac La Biche

Group From University Of Alberta To Present "Maytime In Alberta"

The University of Alberta Mixed Chorus under the sponsorship of the Cultural Activities Branch of the province of Alberta will be presenting "Maytime in Alberta" in Lac la Biche Memorial Hall, Friday, May 13 at 8:30 p.m. Professor Richard S. Eaton, of the University of Alberta, is conductor of the chorus. Local arrangements to accommodate the mixed chorus are being made by the Women's Institute and the Lions Club.

The University of Alberta mixed chorus began as a glee club of 50-75 members in 1944. In 1947 Richard E. Eaton joined the University staff and was invited by the students to conduct the chorus which he has done ever since.

Since that time three formal concerts have been presented annually at Convocation Hall, and these concerts are now followed by three more in various places in the central part of the province. This has now earned the name of the "winter tour."

At the end of final examinations the "spring tour" choir, a group of approximately 80 students, begin rehearsing for a 10 to 12 day tour of parts of the province. The chorus has sung in more than 50 different communities in the province, from the Peace River and Cold Lake countries to the cities and towns in the south. One year they made a tour through the Okanagan Lake district of British Columbia.

On four occasions the chorus has taken part in "Maytime in Alberta", sponsored by the cultural activities branch of the provincial government, and this year under the same sponsorship the chorus plans to make a return visit to the Peace River district.

The Conductor of the Mixed Chorus, Professor Richard S. Eaton, has been travelling with the chorus each spring since '48, his 1st year as a member of the University of Alberta staff. Since that time more than 1500 students have passed through the ranks of the chorus, and many of them have gone out into the communities of Canada especially to form their own choirs.

Professor Eaton began his musical Life in Victoria, B.C., as a choristor and assistant organist at Christ Church Cathedral. Following three years of study at McGill University, he taught at preparatory school, Upper Canada College, Toronto, then at Technical High School in Ottawa. Since coming to Alberta, he has devoted a great deal of his time to the mixed chorus, which he says is the chief pleasure in his musical activities.

In addition to his work with this student group, Profesor Eaton conducts the University Singers, a group of graduates and friends of the University, many of whom were formerly members of the mixed chorus.

Professor Eaton is head of the music division, University of Alberta, and director of the western board of music in Alberta. He is present chairman of the Alberta music board of the provincial government, chairman of the Edmonton Allied Arts Council and vice-president of the Canadian College of Organists.

During his 13 years with the mixed chorus throughout the province, he has seen an increasing interest in the desire for the best in musical education and presentation. To satisfy this desire on the part of communities large and small, he is always ready to help in any way he can so that the best music may be available to them.
